Quotient Clinical is a newly formed business unit within the Quotient Bioresearch Group of companies. We pride ourselves on our global reputation for providing a unique and comprehensive range of early clinical and product development services.

This position will be responsible for the medical aspects of Phase I and IIa clinical trials and will contribute to the successful planning and delivery of studies under the direction of a Principal Investigator. Your work will include the screening and medical supervision of study subjects, review of study protocols and production of safety reports. This is an excellent opportunity for someone who is looking to use their medical training to gain new skills in a challenging commercial environment and who will enjoy working within a multi-skilled team including nurses, scientists and project managers. Some on-call duties will be required.

Essential Requirements:

- Full license to practice by the General Medical Council
- A minimum of three years of postgraduate clinical experience which should normally involve direct patient care and experience of prescribing
- ALS certificate issued within the last 4 years
- Previous research experience would be an advantage but is not essential as training will be provided.
