

Pharmaceutical Medicine: A Survival Guide

2009 Dates
12, 13, 14 May
10, 11, 12 November
UK Thames Valley

Approved for CPD (18 credits)

The BrAPP Survival Guide is a well-established three-day residential workshop devised by pharmaceutical physicians specifically to meet the needs of doctors who have recently joined the industry.

Our aim is to provide an overview of the variety of different roles and activities that medically-qualified entrants are (and will be) exposed to during their careers in the pharmaceutical industry.

Our presenters all boast long and varied experience in the pharmaceutical industry and they are selected because they are happy to impart their own observations of those careers—so far.

The format of the three days centres around interactive-presentations and Q&A sessions in a relaxed and stress-free environment. We are currently devising a case study which will provide a cohesive thread to the workshop.

The transition from clinical medicine or academic research to the industry is an exciting and demanding journey requiring individuals to learn new skills and harness old ones in a new environment. Our goal is to assist this process, to offer an insight into the long term career that is pharmaceutical medicine and to begin the building of invaluable networks of fellow professionals.

BrAPP Survival Guide is intended to complement in-house induction and training courses and also any postgraduate courses in pharmaceutical medicine.

Who should attend?

- Pharmaceutical physicians with up to nine months industry experience
- Other medical department personnel with an interest in understanding pharmaceutical medicine
